

Back to School... But Are They Really Ready?

More than 20% of students have vision problems that interfere with their ability to learn, read, and comprehend. Since 80% of all school work requires reading, writing and other prolonged near-vision work, school can be a challenge for both children and parents.

You're invited a free workshop in which you will learn about learning-related vision problems and how to test for and identify them. You'll have time to ask questions and learn what can be done to alleviate these conditions.

What: Free Back to School Workshop for Parents
When: Thursday, October 4th, 2018 at 7:00 PM
Where: Vision and Learning Center
